₹480-cr tax claim on Arcelor Mittal Nippon after apex court ruling

INDU BHAN
New Delhi, January 21

UPHOLDING THE GUJARAT tax department's levy of ₹480 crore purchase tax on Arcelor Mittal Nippon Steel India (earlier Essar Steel), the Supreme Court on Friday held that the company was not entitled to any exemption from payment of the tax as it violated the 1992 incentive policy.

While Gujarat government sources said that the new company will be liable to pay the government dues, lawyers for Arcelor Mittal Nippon said the tax demand has already been extinguished after its takeover of Essar Steel. However, the judgment did not deal with the liability part.

A bench comprising justices MR Shah and Sanjiv Khanna set aside the Gujarat high court's May 2016 judgment that had upheld the Gujarat Value Added Tax Tribunal's order that held Essar Steel (ESL) was entitled to the exemption from payment of purchase tax.

ESL, the manufacturer of hot briquetted iron and hot rolled coil at its two units at Hazira in Suret, by transferring raw materials like naphtha and natural gas from its eligible unit to Essar Power after availing the exemption from payment of purchase tax can be said to be violating the eligibility criteria mentioned in the 1992 incentive policy notifications issued by the Gujarat Industries, Mines, and Energy department.

While holding that the levy of penalty by the tax department is "justified and warranted", the judges said that the modus operandi which was adopted by Essar Steel warrants a penalty. By such a transfer/sale from the eligible unit to another unit the benefit of exemption is availed by the 'ineligible' industry, which is wholly inconsistent with the intent and that cannot be said to be in the interest of the government, the bench said, adding there is no question of applicability of principle of promissory estoppel.

Stating that ESL had furnished wrong and false declarations, the judges said that the wordings and the language used in the exemption notifications are "very clear, simple and unambiguous."
